Philip Taaffe

November 2 – December 21, 2019

Opening reception: Friday, November 1, 6–8 p.m.

Luhring Augustine is pleased to announce an exhibition of recent paintings by Philip Taaffe. Marking the artist's third solo show with the gallery, the works on display will demonstrate the mastery with which Taaffe synthesizes a range of processes, visual forms, and imagery to create his cerebral and painterly abstractions.

Taaffe's painting practice is distinguished by its elaborate sampling of techniques and symbols. By merging iconography, design, and art historical and cultural motifs, he generates something authentically new. He employs a wide-ranging lexicon of imagery to produce works rife with geometric forms and interwoven complex patterns which call into question traditionally accepted definitions of realism and abstraction.

Through a unique amalgam of techniques Taaffe creates intricate and contemplative canvases. Gestural brushwork is often contrasted with carefully mapped and measured surfaces that are created with a range of methods from photo-based silkscreens to stencils, collage, scraping, acrylic staining, and bookbinding techniques like gold leaf. His meticulous, labor-intensive methodology has often been compared to that of medieval manuscripts. The visual vibrancy and dynamism that underlie his images reveal the convergence of the optical and the conceptual, the decorative and the narrative, the natural and the man-made, as well as the ancient and the modern. Taaffe's imaginative blend of forms and techniques offers a compelling meditation on contemporary and historical art, architecture, and archaeology.
